Poetry.

Tired Mothers. A little sleep less on your knee— I did not say it as I do today. We are so dull and thankless, and too slow To catch the sunshine till it slips away. And now it seems so far from me, I wish I could not see the valley town. Of warm moist fingers holding yours so tight; You do not prize the blessing over much. Your almost are too tired to pray to-night.

The Stars and Stripes.

Centenary of Their Adoption as the National Emblem.

The earliest instance of the thirteen stripes being used upon an American banner is in one presented to the Philadelphia Light Horse in 1774-75, which is still retained by the troops. General Washington was familiar with this standard, having seen it frequently while receiving the courteous attention of the troops. On Saturday, June 14, 1777, the American Congress, in session at Philadelphia, Resolved, That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white, in a field, representing a new constellation. This was the first and only legislation for the establishment of a national flag for the sovereign Independent States of America, declared Independent July 4, 1776. There was no official pronouncement of this order, until September 3, by the Secretary of Congress, in Philadelphia, while at other places in the States it was not proclaimed until a month later, but the resolution on the subject had been printed in the papers of Philadelphia, New York and Boston. The delay of deciding on a flag was a source of much chagrin to Washington and the army generally. The fact that it was not made public until two months after its adoption shows that there was real tape in those as well as these days. The Stars and Stripes are credited to the Dutch, or to have been borrowed from the designating stripes on the coats of Continental soldiers. By some authorities it is stated that both stars and stripes were suggested by the arms of Washington, which, by a singular coincidence, contain both. The resolution of June 14, 1777, says nothing about their arrangement in the union. It does say, however, that they represent not Lycra or any other known heavenly cluster of stars, but a new constellation. It will never be clearly known who designed our union of stars. In 1870, William J. Canby, of Philadelphia, read before the Pennsylvania Historical Society a paper on the history of the American flag, in which he stated that his maternal grandmother, Mrs. John Ross, was the first maker and partial designer of the Stars and Stripes. The house where the flag was made is still standing, No. 239 Arch street, below Third.

The pattern from which Mrs. Ross (who was an upholsterer) made the flag was drawn by Gen. Washington in June, 1776. The flag, as now designed, was adopted by Congress June 14, 1777, and was the first star spangled banner, for aught that is known to the contrary, which ever floated on the breeze. On the 14th of June, 1777, Congress also Resolved, That Paul Jones be appointed to the command of the Ranger, and soon after he hoisted the new flag on board that vessel at Portsmouth. To Jones was given the honor of displaying the flag for the first time on board the first ship of the line built for the United States, fitly named The America. This ship, like the Ranger was built at Portsmouth, New Hampshire. Before she could be launched, the Magnifique, one of the most seventy-four of the French navy, was standing in the Boston harbor, and to replace her the America was by a resolution of Congress, resented to our ally, the French. The first military incident connected with the Stars and Stripes occurred on the 3d, of August, 1778, when Lieutenant Burd and Brant crossed Fort Stanwix or Schuyler, and were commanded by Col. Peter Gansevoort. The garrison had no flag, and their indignity soon supplied an emblem according to the pattern adopted by Congress. Shirts were torn up to supply the white stripes, pieces of scarlet cloth were joined to the white, the blue ground for the stars was composed of a cloth cloak belonging to a Captain Swartwout. Before sunset the curious mosaic-work standard, as precious to the beleaguered garrison as the most beautiful wrought flag of silk and needle work, was floating over one of the bastions. There is no record of what became of this improvised flag, the siege being raised on the 22d of August. Another account gives to Washington the honor of being the first to display the flag, in his hurried movement to repulse Cornwallis at Trenton. As this movement against Cornwallis, and the success which followed it at Princeton, had such a heavy influence on the struggle for independence and its final success it is a favorite view of historians to accept it as presidential, and as the really first display of the great emblem. There is no question that the flag was unfurled at the battle of Brandywine, September 13, 1777, eight days after the official promulgation at Philadelphia; and at Germantown on the 4th of October following; that they witnessed the operations against that final surrender of Burgoyne after the battle of Saratoga, October 17, 1777; that the sights of this new constellation helped to cheer the patriots of the army, amid the sufferings around the camp fires at Valley Forge the ensuing winter; that they moved triumphantly at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, September 19, 1781; looked down upon the evacuation of New York, November 25, 1783, and, as history tells us, shared in all the glories of the latter days of the revolution.

On the 23th of June, 1778, the Stars and Stripes for the first time waved over a foreign fort, Fort Mifflin, which was captured, with the cannon, ammunition and five hundred stand of arms, by an American man-of-war. In the port lay a sixteen gun ship, with a crew of forty-five men, and five vessels, all prizes to the British sloop Angler. At daybreak four men were sent on board the sixteen-gun ship to take possession, and send the officers and crew to the fort. This was the first capture under the flag, and the port of Nassau the first foreign port in which the Stars and Stripes were hoisted in triumph. The prizes thus seized were manned, the guns of the fort spiked, and the entire American garrison put to sea. Such is a brief resume of the career of the Stars and Stripes from the day of their adoption to the time when they first waved over a foreign port. Since that period the flag has triumphed in all the wars, foreign and domestic, in which it floated. There is not a stain upon it, and it has ever commanded the respect of friends and foes. The only dishonor it has ever suffered was that inflicted by the slaveholders of the South, who encouraged by the leaders of the Democratic party, sought to trail it in the dust, but that cowardly assault was repulsed, and the flag to-day, is the pride of our country and one of the chief glories of the world.

What a Hearty Appetite Did. Not so very long ago there arrived at San Antonio, Texas, a gentleman from a large town on the railroad between there and Galveston. He put up at one of the hotels, and displayed a tremendous appetite. At the end of the week he expected to be presented with his bill, but no bill was presented, although he had no luggage at all. Time went on and still no bill. The landlord treated him with lofty courtesy, as did the waiters. One night, however, he did not return to the hotel, and next morning the landlord hired a detective, who hunted and found him. The stranger thought the landlord was going to have him put in jail for swindling, or something else, and he felt very much alarmed. He said no. The landlord was as pleasant as ever. He asked the stranger what he had done that he should desert his hotel in that way, inquired whether the waiters had offended him, and finally begged him to return to his hotel once more, promising to furnish him with oysters or anything else he might wish. The stranger was astonished. He told the landlord that he couldn't pay his bill. The landlord replied he did not want any bill, and finally extorted from the stranger the promise to return to the hotel. After a few days, the stranger took the landlord aside, thanked him with tears in his eyes, and asked him why he was so anxious for him to eat at that hotel free of charge. "I'll tell you," was the reply; "I don't care a cent for you personally, but since you have been eating here I have had forty more guests to dinner than I ever had before. They come here for no other purpose than to look at you eat—you eat so heartily. But the trouble is, I had $2,000 but you would choke to death within a specified time. To-day is the last day, and I have lost. Git!" And he kicked him nineteen feet ten inches into the street.

The Bible.

Who composed the following description of the Bible we may never know. It was found in Westminster Abbey, nameless and dateless, but nevertheless, it is invaluable for its wise and wholesome counsel to the race of Adam: A nation would be truly happy if it were governed by no other laws than those of this blessed book. It contains everything needful to be known or done. It gives instruction to a Senate, authority and direction to a magistrate. It cautions a witness, requires an impartial verdict of a jury, and furnishes the judge with his sentence. It sets the husband as the lord of his household, and the wife as mistress of the table; tells him how to rule, and her how to manage. It entails honor to parents, and enjoins obedience on children. It prescribes and limits the sway of the sovereign, and the power of the ruler, and the authority of the master; commands the subject to honor and the servant to obey, and promises the protection of the Almighty to all that work by this rule. It gives directions for weddings and burials. It promises food and raiment, and limits the use of both. It points out a faithful and eternal Guardian to the departing husband and father; tells him with whom to leave his fatherless children, and whom his widow is to trust; and promises a kind father to the former and a husband to the latter. It very implicitly forbids a Guardian to steal not his wife's honest money, and never urge upon him the dark side of the picture of mother earth.

It teaches a man to set his house in order, and how to make his will, it appoints a dowry for his wife and entails the rights of the first born, and shows how the young branches shall be left. It defends the right of all, and revends vengeance to every defaulter, overreacher, and trespasser. It is the first book, the best book. It contains the choicest matter, gives the best instruction, affords the greatest degree of satisfaction and pleasure that we have ever enjoyed. It contains the best laws and most profound mysteries that were ever penned, and it brings the very best comforts to the inquiring and disconsolate. It is a brief recital of all that is to come. It settles all matters in debate, resolves all doubts, and eases the mind and conscience of all their scruples. It reveals the only living and true God, and showing the way to him, sets aside all other gods, and describes the vanity of them and all that trust in such; in short it is a book of laws to show the right and wisdom, that condemns a folly and makes the foolish wise; a book of life, that shows the way from everlasting death. It contains the most ancient antiquities, strange events, wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds and unparalleled wars. It describes the celestial, terrestrial, and infernal worlds, and the origin of the angelic, myriads, the human tribes, and the devilish legions. I will instruct the most accomplished mechanic and the most profound scholar. It teaches the best rhetoric, and exercises every power of the most skillful arithmetician, puzzles the wisest anatomist, and confounds the subtlest critic. It is the best covenant that ever was agreed on—the best deed that will ever be signed.

A GOOD CEMENT.—A good cement, for mending almost anything, may be made by mixing together lithergo and glycerine to the consistency of thick cream or fresh putty. This cement is useful for mending stone jars, or any coarse earthenware, stopping leaks in seams of tin pans or wash boiler cracks and holes in iron kettles, &c. I have filled holes an inch in diameter in kettles, and used the same for years in boiling water and feed. It may also be used to fasten on lump tops, to tighten loose nuts, to secure loose bolts whose nuts are lost, to tighten loose joints of wood or iron, loose boxes in wagon hubs, and in a great many other ways. In all cases the articles mended should not be used till the cement has hardened, which will require from one day to a week, according to the quantity used.—This cement will resist the action of water, hot or cold, acids, and almost any degree of heat. The Centennial Board of Finance have returned to the government all but $50,000 of the money due. A cross charge of $20,000 has been entered against the amount still unpaid for expenses incurred in advancing pay to the custom house officers employed on the grounds. The stockholders will probably receive thirty cents on the dollar. Two-thirds of this amount is now ready for distribution and the remainder will be distributed after all the expenses of the Board are ascertained.

THE RESTS WELL.

Mr. H. R. STEVENS: Dear Sir—I have been sick two years with the liver complaint, and during that time have taken a great many different medicines but none of them did me any good. I was reduced to a skeleton and had no appetite. Since taking the Vegetine I feel well and robust, and can recommend the Vegetine for what it has done for me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ALBERT RICKER. Will need of the above. Mr. Geo. M. Vaughan, Medford, Mass. VEGETINE. Thousands will bear testimony (and do so) to the fact that Vegetine is the best medical compound yet placed before the public for renovating and purifying the blood, conducting all humors, impurities or poisonous secretions from the system, and restoring to the system the vitality and vigor which it has lost. It is as sure as death to cure. "The Great Health Restorer."

VEGETINE.

Mr. H. R. STEVENS: In 1872 your Vegetine was recommended to me, and yielding to the persuasions of a friend, I commenced to use it. At the time, I was suffering from general debility and nervous prostration, accompanied by overwork and irregular habits. Its wonderful strengthening and curative properties seemed to exert my debilitated system from the first dose, and under its pressure I rapidly recovered, gaining more than double health and good feeling. Since then I have not hesitated to give Vegetine my most unqualified endorsement as being a safe, sure and powerful agent in promoting health and restoring the wasted system to new life and energy. Vegetine is the only medicine used as long as I live I never expect to find a better. Yours truly, W. H. CLARK, 123 Monterey Street, Albany, Pa.

VEGETINE.

Mr. H. R. STEVENS: I have been suffering from my health (nearly a year) later was attacked by typhoid fever in its worst form. It settled in my back and took the form of a large deep-seated abscess, which was not seen until I gathered. I had no relief until I was cured by the use of your Vegetine. I had been in the State but received no permanent cure. I suffered great pain at times and was constantly weakened by a profuse discharge. I also lost small pieces of bone at different times. My doctor, when a friend recommended me to go to your office and talk with you of the virtues of your Vegetine. I did so, and by your kindness passed through your manufactory, noting the ingredients, etc., by which your remedy is produced. By what I saw and heard I gained some confidence in your Vegetine. I commenced taking it soon after, but felt worse from its effects; still I persevered and soon felt it was something in another remedy. Yet I did not see the results I desired, till I had taken it faithfully for a little more than a year, when the difficulty in the back was cured, and for nine months I have enjoyed the best of health. I have to that time gained twenty-five pounds of flesh, being heavier than ever before in my life, and I am now able to perform my usual work.
